DR. C. W. BENSON, of Baltimore, Md.,

In the course of his practice discovered what are now known in the best practice, viz: Diuretic Infusion of Celery and Chamomile in the shape of Pills. They are used by the profession at large and are daily prescribed by them.

This most potent specific. It is the result of his observation for many years. They are STILL UNSURPASSED in relieving special diseases, and in every instance where all other means have failed. They are prepared expressly to cure sick headache, nervous and chronic dyspeptic headache, neuralgia, paralysis, sleeplessness, dyspepsia and nervousness, and will cure any case. The Celery, great remedy for sleeplessness, called Dr. Benson's Skin Cure, is one of the most valuable and sought after preparations for those who have skin diseases or bad complexion. An excellent hair dressing.

Sold by all druggists. Price 50 cents a box. Depot, 308 North E. Baltimore St., Baltimore, Md. By mail, two boxes for $1, or six boxes for $2.50 in one address.

"HAVE YOU CHILL NOW?" Hilton St., New York City, is agent for Dr. C. W. Benson's remedies, to whom all orders should be addressed."

Country Gentleman.

THE BEST OF THE

AGRICULTURAL WEEKLIES.

Enlargement for 1882.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN is the Leading Journal of American Agriculture. In amount and practical value of contents, in extent and ability of corps employed, in quality of paper and style of publication, it occupies the FIRST RANK. It is believed to have no superior in either of the three other divisions of

Farm Crops & Processes, Horticulture & Fruit-Growing, Live Stock and Dairying, while it also includes all minor departments of rural interest, such as the Poultry Yard, Entomology, Bee-Keeping, Greenhouse, Seed Department, Veterinary Repts, Farmers' Club and Answers, Editorial Reading Item, Rural Economy, and a summary of the News of the Week. The MARKET REPORT is unusually complete, and much attention is paid to the Prospects of the Crops, as throwing light upon one of the most important of all questions—"What to Buy and When to Sell." It is liberally and carefully illustrated (as it is intended to supply), in a continually increasing degree, and in the best sense of the term, a LIVE AGRICULTURAL NEWSPAPER.

The Volume of the COUNTRY GENTLEMAN for 1882 will be LARGELY INCREASED in contents by the addition of a sufficient number of pages to meet the growing demands upon its space, but the terms will continue as follows, when in all cases in advance: ONE COPY, one year, $2 50; FOUR COPIES $10, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club; TEN COPIES, $20, and an additional copy for the year free to the sender of the Club.

NEW Subscribers for 1882 paying in advance now will receive THE PAPER WEEKLY from receipt of remittance to January 1st, 1883, WITHOUT CHARGE.

ASSIGNEES' SALE

—OF—

Dirigo Slate Quarry.

Pursuant to order of the Insolvent Court for Cumberland County, State of Maine, the undersigned assignees of the will sell at public auction, at the auction room of F. O. Gailey & Co., No 1½ Exchange Street, Portland, Maine, on FRIDAY, the third (3d) day of March, A. D. 1882, at two o'clock P. M., all the real estate of the Dirigo Slate Quarry Company, in the town of Monson, County of Piscataquis, State of Maine, including the WELL KNOWN and VALUABLE SLATE QUARRY of said Company; also ALL BUILDINGS, FIXTURES, IMPROVEMENTS, TOOLS, AND ALL OTHER PERSONAL PROPERTY whatever belonging to said Dirigo Slate Quarry, about said real estate and quarry, and at the railroad siding at Abbot.

A large property, both real and personal, will be offered in one lot, subject to taxes or the current year, amounting to fifty one thousand, seven hundred ($51,7 0) dollars, and a mortgage payable July 5th, A. D., 1882, for seven hundred dollars and interest from July 5th, A. D., 1881, at six per cent per annum, payable semi-annually.

Sale will be positive, and to the highest bidder. Terms, ten (10) per cent cash at sale, balance in one to four, at the option of the purchaser, payable at the office, H. W. L. Putnam in said Portland.

Among the appurtenances of the Quarry, included in the sale, are a wood derrick, seven lines of railroad, large tools, boiler and appurtenances, engine and air tanks, black smith's with tools and supplies, steam drilling machines and appurtenances, tackle and appurtenances, and a complete variety and supply of tools and machinery for the operation of said Quarry.

The real estate is the same as that conveyed to said Company by deed of A. Hunter, recorded in E. Hunter by deed dated August 31, A. D. 1872, March 13, A. D. 1873, June 15, A. D. 1875 and May 17, A. D. 1879, recorded in Piscataquis County Registry of Deeds, vol. 34, pp. 6, 7 & 8, vol. 62, p. 122, and vol. 74 p. 528.

Further information and a detailed list of the property believed to be on hand, appurtenances to said property, and the mode in which the sale may be had upon application to F. O. Gailey & Co.

The undersigned give notice by this notice of sale, not by the list of property, nor by their deeds, nor warranty, express or implied; and purchasers before bidding must satisfy themselves that all statements of title, property on hand and of value or condition are correct, and will be required to complete the purchase upon the understanding that such notice and list are only statements of the belief of the assignees as to the matters which they contain, and nothing more.

January 4th, A. D., 1882.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

There are no new developments in the Pulverman robbery in Lewiston. The police have found no clue of any sort, to indicate in what direction the goods were taken. Mr. Pulverman's store was closed and he was engaged in taking account of stock.

A slight fire in the picker of the Bates mills was promptly extinguished by the hands, with the corporation hydrants, about six o'clock, Tuesday morning. No alarm was made and very little damage was done, nothing burning except cotton.

Lisbon Falls had a wholesale scare, Monday night. Victory lodge of Good Templars celebrated their eighth anniversary in the Baptist chapel. People from Lewiston, Auburn, Lisbon, Durham and other surrounding places were present. The church was crowded to a greater extent than it could survive. It is estimated that five hundred people were packed into the little chapel. It was a great occasion for Lisbon Falls. In the midst of the opening prayer, a great crash came, and a chorus of shrieks followed. The prayer was suddenly abbreviated. The timbers supporting one section of the floor, in the rear of the church, gave way. The floor settled about two feet, till it reached the ground, there being, fortunately, no basement. No one was injured, but the congregation's nerves were entirely unstrung for a moment. The stove happened to be on the part of the floor that caved. A shower of sparks shot from it, and caused cries of "fire" which increased the alarm. A stampede began and was only quieted by the vigorous efforts of a few clear headed persons.

The Lewiston Journal says: A maniac woman, Mrs. John Lamey, residing on Bates street, has made that vicinity an undesirable place of residence of late. On Monday she nearly caused an exodus from Baby Patch by her mad freaks, scaring dwellers and pedestrians. She appeared on the street barefoot and in her night robe. Monday evening, her husband was unable to exercise the least influence over her. She pelted him and everyone with missiles and made the air ring with terrible cries. Monday night she had the house to herself, her family doubtful to risk their lives with her. She was armed with two knives and had a large candle-stick for reserve ammunition. She refused admittance to, and assaulted a clergyman, who called to see her, and she broke nearly all the windows in the house. Tuesday morning two policemen went up and found Mr. Lamey holding the door, outside, but not venturing to go inside. Policeman McGillicuddy went into the house, the maniac recognized him and did not attack him, but volunteered to put on her clothes and be conducted to the police station. Mrs. Lamey was kept in the Marshal's office, for a while, but broke a window, and become so violent that she was removed to a cell. She was taken to the asylum at Augusta, Tuesday, P. M.

Parties representing themselves as agents of the Hutchinson Manufacturing Co., of Portland, and who have been selling alleged patent mop wringers, in various places in Maine and New Hampshire, have been detected in Portsmouth, N. H., as frauds. The men have managed to make their escape.

The Press says the town report of Cape Elizabeth shows the valuation of the town to be $1,751,305; the number of polls, 1,262; rate of taxation, $1 60 on $100.

Four fishermen arrived in Portland Tuesday, who tell a hard story of their captain. They say the schooner H. S. Rowe, Captain Moore, left that port three weeks ago Monday for La Have, on a fishing trip. The schooner was very fortunate, and Saturday last arrived at Boston with a cargo, which sucked between $500 and $600. The captain, they allege, sold the fish and cleared out, leaving a portion of the crew without means. The owners of the vessel telegraphed to the part of the crew that remained in Boston to look after the schooner.

Hancock.

For twenty-five years there has not been so much building in Castine as at this time. It is not so much the number of new buildings, of which there are several, as the great enlargement of the hotels. Two stories have been added to the Acadia, and two wings, with a very striking and ornamental finish. The Castine House has been raised one story higher, with a Mansard roof. One wing 90 feet long is going up, and another is to be added.

The transfers of real estate in Kennebec county last week, as recorded at the office of Register of Deeds, amounted to $9,893 66

Eben W. Blaisdell was put under $1500 bonds at Augusta, Tuesday, to await the convening of the April term of the Superior Court. His alleged offence is raising a town order from $3 30 to $33.30.

Oxford.

The lumber business is very lively in Dixmark the present winter. There are more or less teams in every school district engaged in hauling poplar, oak, birch, hemlock, spruce and pine lumber, either to the depot at Brownfield or to the mills. The poplar is mostly hauled to the depot and sent to Cumberland Mills to be used for paper pulp. The birch is used at the clothes pin manufactory in this place, two hundred cords of which will be used for that purpose. But among all our manufactories the cords shop of Burnham & Morrill brings the most ready cash into Dixmark. The shop is now superintended by Frank Giles, formerly of Minot, who is engaged with seven or eight men, manufacturing cans for the season of 1882. They are intending to put up seven hundred thousand cans this season.

Somerset.

The Somerset Reporter says: There is a good demand for ash hoops this season. Mr. S. W. Lawton tells us that he has purchased some three hundred thousand so far, paying from nine to twenty-seven dollars per thousand. The average price is about $15.

On Sunday last Mr. Goodwin, of Skowhegan, submitted to a second amputation of the leg above the knee about midway from the knee to the hip. He stood the operation well and his physician reports him to be doing as well just now as could be expected. Mr. Goodwin has been a great sufferer for 19 weeks. His case is very different from a usual case of gangrene that sometimes attacks the toes of old people. The cause of trouble in Mr. Goodwin's case was an obstruction in the blood vessels of arteries supplying the blood to the foot or leg below the knee. The physicians found the obstruction which was a clot of blood in the main artery under the knee; therefore they are more hopeful in the success of the second operation. A few weeks will determine the result. Of course Mr. Goodwin is much reduced in strength.

THE PAUL REVERE TANKARD.

"Readers of this paper," says the Boston Journal, "will doubtless remember a mention made a few weeks ago of a silver tankard stamped 'P. Revere,' which was found in possession of some one in Waterville, Me., and which was regarded as a relic of great value. Within a few days it was ascertained that the tankard in question had been traced back to Scotland, whence it was brought a hundred years ago, and a doubt of its being the work of Paul Revere was consequently raised. This doubt seems, however, to be dispelled by the fact that Mrs. W. H. Emery, of Newton, has now in her possession a tankard similar to that found in Maine, which was unquestionably made by Revere in 1797. Mr. Emery is a descendant of Thomas and Rebecca Goodwill, who presented the tankard to their granddaughter, Lydia Holmes, who afterward married John Bishop, of Medford, from whom it descended to Mrs. Emery. Some of the family were undoubtedly loyalists, otherwise the following bill prepared for presentation to the British Government, could hardly have been allowed:

Account of loss sustained by Rebecca Holmes by the British troops when in Boston.

1 house in Quarter street,		£200.0.0
1 outho	ditto	133.6.8
1 barn	ditto	15.0.0
Furniture		20.0.0
		£3 8.6.8

The probability is that the Maine tankard was carried out of the country by loyalists, and subsequently brought back again to Maine. We agree with our namesake in its theory, as the tankard now in the possession of Mr. S. A. Russell, of this city, is plainly of American make, as it has no government stamp upon it, which is the case of all silver ware made in Great Britain. Mr. Russell is looking up the history of the tankard, and his researches demonstrate that it is a genuine relic of Paul Revere. He has received one offer of $500 for it.—Kennebec Journal.

Harper's Magazine.

ILLUSTRATED.

"Always varied, always good, always improving."—CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, Jr.

Harper's Magazine, the most popular illustrated periodical in the world, begins its sixty-fourth volume with the December number. It represents what is best in American literature and art; and its mark of success in England—where it has already a circulation larger than that of any English magazine of the same class—has brought into its service the most eminent writers and artists of Great Britain. The forthcoming volumes for 1882 will in every respect surpass their predecessors.

Republican Caucuses.

The Republican voters of the City of Bangor are hereby invited to meet at

CITY HALL,

Thursday Evening, March 9, 1882,

at 7 o'clock,

to nominate a candidate for MAYOR.

They are also invited to meet at the polling places in the various Wards on SATURDAY EVENING, March 11th, at 7:30 o'clock, to nominate candidates for Aldermen, Councilmen and Ward Officers, to be voted for at the Municipal election, March 13th, 1882.

By order of the Republican City Committee

G. A. DAVENPORT, Chairman.

March 1, 1882.

ABOUT CAUCUSES

It appears that the editor of THE WHIG is unwilling to publish a paid advertisement of a call for a meeting of citizens, unless it emanates from what he considers "some responsible source."—Commercial.

Precisely. We do not permit our columns to be used to summon the citizens of Bangor to a public meeting of any kind without knowing whether there is any body behind the summons. We do not permit any anonymous individual who may send us "a paid advertisement" to have the use of this paper for any purpose that may please his whim. When it comes to the matter of political caucuses, it is too omary for all parties to have the calls authenticated by the signature of some officer or committeeman, and a call for a political meeting which has not so much as a name to accredit it, has no claim to consideration in any responsible newspaper office.

The anonymous call for a "temperance caucus" which appeared in the Commercial Wednesday, was brought to us yesterday with the names of T. B. Chalmers and E. K. Watson appended as "Committee" in reply to inquiries as to what they were a committee of, we were given to understand that the Reform Club were in some way behind the movement but we were not permitted to attach that statement to the call and we are unable to learn that the Reform Club have in any way authorized the calling of any caucus. That organization has always sought to avoid any interference in politics and whatever may be set on foot by individuals, we do not believe that the Bangor Reform Club intended to let it be used as a political weapon against the Republican party in our Spring election.

Every intelligent citizen can see in the daily reports from all over the State how zealously the opposition are carrying out the orders of the recent meeting of the Fusion State Committee, to stir up all sorts of movements possible, to organize "citizens" and "tax payers", and "independent" and "temperance" caucuses, in the hope of covering up their own identity and possibly of deceiving a few Republicans into movements hostile to their own party. In Bangor the Fusionists having no other hope, are going after a multitude of caucuses and if they can insidiously reduce Republicans to call some of them, they think it so much the better. With one caucus called for Tuesday, we learn that City Hall has already been engaged for Friday afternoon and Friday evening for other anti-Republican caucuses, in more or less disguise, and others have engaged it for an additional caucus on Saturday.

The Republicans propose to hold one set of caucuses, in their own name, and without any attempt to hoodwink the people. The City Government of Bangor, everybody of sense knows will be controlled and conducted the coming year by the Republicans or by the Fusion-Democracy. Side issues can only help the one or the other of the two parties, and every vote cast will in reality be in favor of Republican or of Fusion-Democratic rule. That is all there is about it and the people understand it. They will continue to sustain the party that is honest enough to fight its battles under its own banner.

THE ATTACKS UPON SHERMAN AND BLAINE.

[From the N. Y. Tribune.]

In a private letter to a friend which has been published Senator Sherman says: "I see by your letter that you appreciate the ordeal through which my enemies have made me pass. After what I supposed was a successful and beneficial term of duty in the Treasury, I am obliged to contest with 'dead beats' and liars for my reputation. Still, it is the order of the day thus to break down, if possible, all who are not of a certain school. The men who are putting forward these libel and slanders are irresponsible, a suit with them for damages would be a joke, and the jail a refuge." This is the simple truth, stated with entire moderation when we consider the provocation to strong language. After a term of service in the Treasury Department which will rank in history as one of the most remarkable and beneficent which the country has ever been blessed with, Mr. Sherman was justified in believing that whatever else the public might do to show its appreciation of his work, it would not grace him with slanders. It would be a mistake to say the public has either done this, or has given its belief to the slanders which malignant and unscrupulous enemies invented about him. The shame of it is that the public failed to so express its indignation as to make an investigation of the charges unnecessary.

Why they were started everyone knows. Mr. Sherman and Mr. Blaine together defeated the third term scheme at Chicago. Nothing but their patriotism, which will be forever remembered to their honor, in bidding their supporters to leave them and vote for any opponent of the third term who could be nominated, saved the Republican party from the commission of a fatal blunder. Both men have never been forgiven by the defeated faction, and never will be. They have been pursued from that day to this by a hatred as malignant as it is complimentary. The people are on their side as strongly to-day as they were in June, 1880, and all the brass medals and murderers' bullets in the world are not potent enough to change them.

There is liveliness in the opposition camp in Augusta over the nomination of Police Judge. It is declared that Governor Plaisted squarely promised the nomination to Joseph Badger, to Byron Wilson and to R. W. Black, and then he went and nominated Andrews, the former editor of a fearfully cheap Greenback paper. We should like to listen to the classic oratory that would flow the lips of that sturdy Democratic war-horse, Gen. Edmund Wilson, if he should get in range of His Excellency's ear.

THE B. & B. RAILROAD QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier.

I noticed in last evening's Commercial an article entitled, "Are we ready to pay $50,000 for nothing?" presenting what it pronounces one of the most feasible plans for the extension of the road, viz. "For the city to make an agreement with the road, allowing the latter to issue new bonds for an amount necessary to construct the extension, and to reserve out of its net earnings a sum sufficient to pay the interest thereon before paying anything into the city Treasury."

Why, Mr. Editor, that exact plan was submitted to the legal voters at the last municipal election and voted down. And what is more, if I am correctly informed, if it had been carried at the polls, no money could have been raised under it, as there were contingencies which deterred capitalists from seeking such an investment. I am very glad to find the Commercial so anxious to have the road extended, but regret that it should go back to propositions found to be impracticable and discarded by the voters, rather than forward to some plan which will remove all obstacles in the way of immediate success, though it may deem them unpalatable. No one person can have his own way in the business affairs of this life, and no good business man will imperil his future prospects because he cannot drive out others who stand in his way. He will make his peace with them on the best terms possible, and then go on to fortune. Let us act the part of the wise and prudent and do likewise.

CITIZEN.

MR. BLAIN'S EULOGY

[From the New York Times, anti Blaine.]

Mr. Blaine's eulogy was every way worthy of the subject and the occasion. It said nothing to cause regret and leaves no sense of inadequacy or omission of what was called or. It will not rank among great funeral orations, but it was graceful, fitting, and sufficient. Its chief merit is that it is full of its subject and empty of its author. It embalms the memory of the one in a worthy form, and it furnishes no suggestion of the relations of the other to that subject or to the great public for whose admiration and affectionate remembrance it is presented.

[From the New York World, Dem.]

The task imposed upon Mr. Blaine yesterday was so well performed that most readers of his eulogy will be apt to forget how very delicate and difficult a task it really was. This is one of the highest compliments that could be paid to the skill and tact of the panegyrist.

Indeed it is difficult to name any other Republican who could have delivered so good a memorial address upon Garfield leaving out altogether the speaker's relation to the subject and judging the address as it would be judged by an intelligent foreigner who wished to arrive at a clear understanding of the character of a man famous in his own country who had accidentally become famous throughout the world. Senator Hoar delivered an oration some weeks ago which was printed, more or less, in all the newspapers, but it is so completely unmemorable that it requires an effort of memory to recall that it was ever delivered, while scarcely any memory except that of the orator can recall anything that it contained. Mr. Blaine's address could be secured against so speedy an oblivion by its own intrinsic quality no matter who the eulogist had been or what his relation to his subject. The address is really a fair and temperate and even critical setting forth of the claims which General Garfield had upon the honor of his countrymen, and is noticeably free from the reckless and unscrupulous partisanship which leaves with the reader or the hearer no likeness whatever of its subject.

[From the Philadelphia Record (Ind.)]

As a work of art Mr. Blaine's address will take high rank among the efforts of the kind, and it may safely challenge comparison with the best specimens of commemorative oratory in the English tongue. Its exordium is vigorous, clear cut and crisp, and the pathetic eloquence of its peroration stamps it as a classic. The style is easy without being commonplace, and elevated without turgidity. It is a singularly compact production. Mr. Blaine sketches the figure of his friend in few and clear lines, and paints a panorama of his career which is the more pictorial because it has no meretricious ornament or flourish. Nothing is wanting to the completeness of the work, and yet there is in it not a touch too much.

PERSONAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Hans Makart, the distinguished painter of Vienna, has just completed a full length portrait of Sarah Bernhardt.

During the past month 16,751 immigrants were landed at Castle Garden, as against 9,753 during February, 1881.

Charles Dudley Warner says that next to an effeminate man there is nothing so disagreeable as a mannish woman.

Lord Houghton, who is at the British Legation at Athens, has been attacked by paralysis. His left side is affected.

Mrs. Don Cameron is slowly recovering, and her husband has just taken her to the South to hasten her return to health.

The wife of Justice Harlan is critically ill in Washington, and cannot, it is feared, recover. Her children are all with her.

At the Boston preachers' meeting of the Methodist Episcopal church a resolution of sympathy with Gov. Long was passed.

Thomas Brown, an employe of the Page Belting Company, in Concord, N. H., has become insane, the result, it is believed, of religious excitement.

The Virginia Legislature has passed a bill to establish a colored normal school, with an appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars.

The Rev. Edward E. Hale will soon sail for Europe. He is going to Spain with his artist daughter, who intends to copy there some of Velasquez's picture.

Newton Case, of Hartford, Conn., has offered to give $100,000 for the library for the Hartford Theological Seminary, provided an equal amount is raised.

Gen. Grant is expected at the White House as the guest of the President for a few days about the end of this month. He will stop there en route to the South.

Colonel Andrew H. Young, of Dover, N. H., collector of internal revenue, will tender his resignation, to take effect on March 31st. He has filled the office for thirteen years.

Daniel Moray and James Linnehan are missing from Fall River, Mass. The former is believed to have been drowned, and the latter lost in the woods and died from exposure.

A pretty girl of seventeen died suddenly at a ball at Georgetown, Denver. The doctors found that she came to her death from congestion of the brain, superinduced by tight lacing.

An Irish male hospital nurse when asked what case in his ward he deemed the most dangerous, pointed with a grin to the case of surgical instruments on the table, and said, "That, sur."

General Sherman, with General Poe and Colonel Morgan of its staff, will leave Washington this week for a tour of inspection of the Texan frontier of Mexico. Gen. Sherman's daughter, Miss Lizzie, and General Poe's daughter, Miss Winifred, will accompany the party.

Archbishop Purcell is now in better health than he was six months ago, and his friends think he will live to celebrate on October 12, 1883, the golden jubilee of his Episcopal consecration.

The Duc Decazes has been ruined in fortune by the smash of the Union Generale. He has been obliged to break up his Paris home, and is about to sell all of his possessions that are salable.

Jennie Lind advises all American girls who are in Europe studying music to return home, where she says the instruction is just as good and the chances of getting a nice husband much better.

There are living in Candia, N. H., 104 persons who are over 70 years of age; 70 between 70 and 80 years; 31 between 80 and 90 years, and 3 over 90 years. One has arrived at the age of 100 years.

Bishop Peck, who has been confined to his room at Utica since his return from the West to Syracuse, was attacked with violent fits of coughing on Sunday. Medical aid was summoned and at night his condition was more favorable.

Elias Dey Puy, aged ninety five, intends to celebrate his longevity by a family reunion in the little town in Ulster County, New York, where he was born and still lives. A number of his children will be present, including a decrepit man of seventy and a blooming boy of ten, as well as a small army of grandchildren.

"Jack" Conroy, the guide appointed to conduct Mr. Oscar Wilde across the Lockbridge at Niagara, and a man of acute perceptions says that he never before heard anyone "take on so" about a lot of ice as his distinguished convoy did. He is certain that Mr. Wilde is determined to commit the usual folly of "writing a piece" about the ice bridge and the Falls.

MR. MAN'S REASON!

It is the simple duty of every man, rich or poor, who has created a home with all its associations, family ties and home comforts, to make its equipment as complete as possible. The more provided and attractive we make our homes the more provision for future maintenance, to say the least, we make, and yet this mistake is made by the great majority of well meaning men in this country. My business saves me from neglect among them.

FROM WASHINGTON.

General News.

Conkling's Arrival at the Capital

March 2 Conkling arrived in Washington this morning He looked well and was in good spirits He proceeded to his quarters and has received a few visitors Warm friends congratulated him on the place The supreme court was the subject of protracted conference at the White House last night in which Conkling was interested by a friend fully every stream of news It is learned this morning that an authoritative source that while Conkling before leaving New York was disposed to decline the appointment he has about determined to accept it

The Arizona Indians

Gen McDowell states that no trouble from Indians is apprehended on account of the action of troops in Arizona Four companies of cavalry and one of infantry will be present at the execution Agent Tiffany states that his Indians do not object to being removed from the long confinement of White Mountain Apaches on trial

Mason's Trial

Mason moved to make a short statement to the Court Martial to day, but decided not to do so as the Court decided it was not to be on record The counsel for Mason then began his argument

The arguments were submitted record ordered and the Court adjourned Papers now go to the Judge Advocate

Conkling and Sargent Confirmed

Later The Senate in Executive session confirmed the nomination of Roscoe Conkling as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court and ex-Senator Sargent as Minister to Germany

The vote on Conkling's confirmation is understood to have been 39 yeas, against 12 nays—8 Democrats and 4 Republicans, namely Hoar Davis, Morrill and Hawley voting against confirmation.

A number of other senators were paired and several who were present and not paired refrained from voting.

Sargent was confirmed without division.

CONDENSED DESPATCHES.

The despatches from all parts of the lower Mississippi Valley report terrible destruction of property, loss of life and suffering caused by the overflow.

EXTENSIVE FLOODS.

MANY LIVES LOST,

AND THOUSANDS STARVING.

MEMPHIS, March 2 A Greenville, Miss, despatch says fifteen people were drowned at Riverton Landing by the flood and a settlement of 100 people on Bogue Phalia, east of Riverton, are completely surrounded by water and will probably be engulfed. The river now extends practically from the Bluffs to Bayou Macon hills in Arkansas, on the west, to Yazoo hills or Chickasaw Bluffs, on the east, a mean width of 210 miles.

HELENA, Ark March 2 A Helena despatch says that within forty persons have been drowned, and not less than 30 000 head of stock drowned, and a large number of those that escaped the flood, are dying

In Quitman county Miss, the richest portion is affected by the overflow through the break at Lake from Coldwater river and at least two-thirds of 6000 acres of land Deadrick and Beeson, is overflowed Belle is 32 miles southwest from Helena, and is the centre of a magnificent cotton growing section Not less than 1500 head of stock have been drowned and the losses will be far greater if the water remains as high for a great length of time

By the break of the levee of Riverton Miss the country will be flooded in Bolivia Washington Leflore Warren, and Issaquena counties and may reach within a short distance of Vicksburg Fully 30, 000 people will be overflowed, and no one can at this time put an estimate upon the property loss Clarendon, fifty miles west of Helena, on the Arkansas Midland and White River Railroad, is under water from two to three feet and the river is rising an inch in twenty four hours The live stock here must be very heavy Houses and land in Bay are reported to be floating away

LITTLE ROCK Ark March 2 A despatch states that a gentleman from the flooded districts in the White River Valley says no person can estimate the real extent of affairs Hundreds of families are homeless and without food and clothing The sufferers are principally laboring men, tenants on plantations and small farmers and they have lost everything It is believed that many will perish from starvation before government aid can be furnished them Colonel J A Woodson Levee Superintendent of the Little Rock Mississippi & Texas Railroad has arrived from Arkansas City and reports great suffering in Chicot and Desha counties At Arkansas City, the water is two feet above the track in street and running over the tops of the stores in many stores People will have two-story edifices are obliged to make their exit from the second story Two or three people have been drowned and it is impossible to estimate the value of the stock lost in the water Arkansas City is almost deserted Our telegraph wire, Colonel Woodson states, is down, and our track damaged Day before yesterday washed out one of our heavy locomotives two and a half miles through water average eight feet in depth It was a strange sight We kept a man on the cow catchers throwing off the drift wood The levees at Arkansas City are reported given away

The Mohawk and Hudson Floods

ALBANY March 2 Advices along the Mohawk valley state that the Mohawk river is the highest in ten years The New York Central Railroad track is two feet under water in some places, and all trains are delayed The water tore up the rails near Canajoharie and trains are off the track there

The Hudson is nine feet above the usual level and is rising The piers and quays are under water and commerce along the river front has to be transacted in boats

The Delaware Overflowed

MILFORD Pa, March 2 The flood in the Delaware river and its tributaries continues the river is rising slowly The bridges in the environs at the Spoke factory and Swartwout Mills are extinguished by the water The public roads in many places are badly washed and impassable The river continues rising until night, but will not overflow and do great damage

Damages in New Hampshire

LITTLETON N H March 2 The rain of last two days has raised the streams breaking up the ice and doing damage, but no harm done to the railroad bridges has been taken out and trains have been very slowly At Franconia one bridge was carried away and other seriously damaged, while the streets are covered with water and broken ice at Bethlehem Junction the water is two feet over the railroad track and has driven some families out of their homes The rain has ceased and the worst is over

THE WALKING MATCH

Hazael Twenty one Miles Ahead

NEW YORK March 3, 2 00 A M Hazael Fitzgerald and Noremac on the track Score stands Hazael 445 Fitzgerald 424, Rowell 410, Hart 410, Sullivan 410, Hughes, 382, Noremac, 391.

CALIFORNIA

Working Up Anti-Chinese Demonstrations

SAN FRANCISCO, March 2 In view of the fact that a pervading all classes in California, and the general anxiety felt by the people on the Pacific coast for prompt action on the bill before Congress restricting future immigration Gov Perkins is declared his intention to make March 4 a legal holiday and that day a monster anti Chinese mass meeting will be held in San Francisco and similar demonstrations will be made throughout the State In spite of the anti Chinese telegrams have been sent to the Governors of Oregon and Nevada requesting them to take such steps as they deem expedient

GUITEAU DISCUSSED

Volunteer Experts Discussing his Responsibility

NEW YORK, March 2 At a meeting of the Medico Legal Society last night, Dr Hammond read a paper on Lunacy, Morbid impulse, etc, and claimed that every thing went to show that Guiteau was a subject of "reasoning mania," and hence a lunatic but a lunatic deserving of the punishment accorded him Dr Parsons concurred with Hammond but not as to the punishment Dr Spitzka held to his views of original insanity in Guiteau and doubted whether his punishment would deter other crazy men from similar crimes Drs Berry, Marion Cory and Henry endorsed Hammond's opinions.

NEW YORK CITY.

The Western Union Dinner to the Press

NEW YORK, March 2 An important conference has been in session in this city for two days between the Western Union Telegraph Co and various press associations, respecting the relations existing between the press and the company. On the satisfactory conclusion of the negotiations pending, the executive committee of the telegraph company invited the representatives of the press to meet them at a dinner at Delmonico's last evening Dr Green presided and there were present Messrs Gould Dillon, Sage, Field and Durkee on behalf of the Western Union, and representatives of the New York, Western, the New England, and the New York Star-Associated Press Speeches were made by Dr Green Messrs D M Stone, Whitelaw Reid, Richard Smith of Cincinnati, Russell Sage Sidney Dillon, Carroll E. Smith of Syracuse, Col R. M Pulsifer, Cols W W Clapp, and Roland Worthington of Boston, Wm P Nixon of Chicago, Cyrus W Field and others The best relations between the press and telegraph were recounted, and universal satisfaction was expressed at the harmonious relations which have resulted from the present conference.

Cabinet Rumors Denied.

The Herald's Washington despatch says: There is no truth in the rumored Cabinet changes, and especially no foundation for the rumors which connect Chandler's name with the navy department.

Anxiety About a Steamer.

The Mutual Union Suit.

On the suit of Babbitt to restrain the Mutual Union Telegraph Co., from issuing certain stock, Judge Blatchford to-day declined to grant the motion that an examination of the books and papers of the Company be made; and decided that the plaintiffs should file their bill of complaint and that argument as to the motion to dissolve the temporary injunction against the Company, granted by Judge Armour, should be heard in the U. S. Circuit Court a week hence.

FORTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS--First Session

Senate

WASHINGTON, March 2 Mr Butler presented a petition from all the bank presidents of the Chamber of Commerce and a number of leading business men of Charleston, S. C., asking a modification of the treaty with the Hawaiian Islands

Mr Farley, of California, spoke in reply to Mr Hoar's speech on the Chinese bill and without concluding yielded for an executive session. Adjourned.

House.

WASHINGTON, March 2. At 12 45 the House went into Committee of the Whole on Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation Bill for $1,198 830

Messrs Ellis and Whitthorne spoke in advocacy of a more vigorous foreign policy and commending the position taken by ex Secretary Blaine in regard to the Clayton Culwer Treaty.

Mr Hewitt, of New York, claimed the United States had a right to demand that American citizens imprisoned in Great Britain should be speedily tried or released Referring to the Monroe doctrine, he took exception to the interpretation put upon it by the State Department. While the United States should not tolerate any European intervention which would impair the sovereignty of its neighbors, it should be ready to accept their guarantees of the neutality of the great interoceanic highway

A noisy colloquy here occurred between Orth, Hewitt and others on the subject of imprisoned Americans in Ireland The discussion was finally cut short by Lawson, of Iowa who claimed the floor, saying it was time the House should return to consideration of the pending bill

In due time when the correspondence of the State Department was published, he thought the gentleman from New York would be surprised and gratified to know that while all the noise on the subject was going on upon the floor, the State Department had been diligently and energetically at work to secure all the rights which belonged to a citizen of the United States

Mr McLane criticized the present diplomatic system and favored a consolidation of missions so there should be but four in Europe

The Committee then rose without action

The Senate amendments to the postroute bill were concurred in and the House adjourned

THE MAIL SERVICE Assistant Postmaster Gen Emery in a letter to Senator Frye states that it is now proposed to forward the mail from Bangor at about 7 30 A M reaching Danforth about mid night, to increase the service on route 238 (from Danforth to Houlton) to six times a week, and require the carrier to leave Danforth on arrival of the midnight train, and arrive in Houlton at an hour making close connection with the mail for Caribou In order to do this it will be necessary to readvertise this service now under contract on route 238 Danforth to Houlton, and 241 Houlton to Caribou, as the department cannot curtail the running time without increasing the compensation of the contractor The service will be readvertised to commence July 1st, 1882

SIGNAL SERVICE STATION A South west Harbor correspondent of the Ellsworth American writes About three weeks ago a signal service station was established here and Mr James Ross appointed observer in charge of the station The signals are displayed on a staff erected on the Pemetic House on the north side of the harbor The "cautionary signal" is a red flag with black square in the centre by day, or a red light by night and calls for caution in view of an approaching storm, and is also a cautionary with reference to winds blowing from any direction The "cautionary off shore signal" is a white flag with black square in the centre, shown above a red flag with black square in the centre, by day, or a white light shown above a red light by night, and is cautionary with reference to winds expected to blow from a northerly or westerly direction, or off shore Southwest Harbor being more frequented by vessels in stormy weather than any other harbor on this part of the coast of Maine a signal service station has been greatly needed here, and the Government has shown wisdom in placing it at this harbor and in the choice of Mr James Ross as observer, who is very faithful in his duties day and night.

ART ASSOCIATION MEETING Notwithstanding the severe storm quite a number of ladies and gentlemen attended the social meeting of the Art Association, at the residence of Hon A C Hamlin, last evening, and were very pleasantly entertained The exercises were opened by a beautiful piano duett brilliantly executed by Mrs Davenport and Miss Merrill Prof John S. Sewall then read a very entertaining and instructive paper on "Christian Art in the Catacombs," in which he sketched the history and character of those cities of the dead, and gave many illustrations of the early developments of Christian art in connection therewith A piano solo was then finely rendered by Miss Maud Simpson, after which Dr Hamlin gave a highly interesting account of the mineral discoveries a. Mount Mica, in Oxford County, illustrated by his splendid collection of tourmalines and other precious stones obtained there. The cabinet collection of Dr Hamlin comprises not only a great variety of specimens of the natural crystals as taken from the ledge, but also a large number of the gems beautifully cut and polished, and arranged in a dazzling array, including some of the finest specimens in the world In addition to these Maine tourmalines, Dr. Hamlin has continued to add from time to time to the superb collection of choice American gems which have been set in the form of necklace, tiara, brooch and ear pendants composed of princely opals, tourquoise, tourmalines and other rare stones. Dr. Hamlin's account of the remarkable mineral deposit at Mount Mica, which are now being explored by a mining company of which he is President, was very interesting, and in connection therewith he gave many valuable facts connected with the rare jewels of the world. John S Jenness, Esq, also exhibited some large and very handsome specimens of cut tourmaline in green and red. The evening's entertainment proved very instructive and enjoyable to all.

AMUSEMENTS

The Mascot

Owing to the extremely disagreeable weather last night the presentation of "The Mascot," by the Boston English Opera Company was witnessed by rather a small audience This opera, which abounds in lively dialogue, ridiculous situations and numerous sparkling musical gems, is deservedly popular with the public The company last evening rendered it fairly well Miss Reignard made a very pretty "Betting" and sang the part with much spirit She was well supported by Mr Molten as "Pippo," who is not a stranger here Mr Rennie as "Lorenzo" had an excellent make up and created much laughter, but he lacks voice Mr Stanton's "Rocco" was good and Miss Corey made a winning "Prince" The other parts need no mention

Our Senator

The sale of seats for "Our Senator" will open at Bagbee & Co's this morning It is expected that a full house will be large

Probabilities

Mr Editor —Apropos to the ice business which has now become so important an industry among the people of Maine, the following incident, related by a legal writer in illustration of the nature of "probability" as an element in the trial of causes, is of much interest

A Dutch Ambassador entertained the King of Siam with the particulars of Holland about which he was inquisitive Among these items of information he told the King that the water in his country would become so hard, that men walk upon it and that it would bear an elephant The King replied "Hitherto I have believed the strange things you have told me because I took upon you as a sober, fair man, but now I am sure you LIE!"

A similar lie of almost as remarkable a character, in this day of steam mills and industry, is presented in our own State Law Reports as late as 1820 in which the law of fixtures was discussed and illustrated Weston, J in delivering the opinion of the Court in a case involving the ownership of a mill chain belonging to a water mill which had been sold uses the following illustration

There was a mill built, in this State a saw mill dropped by steam called the steam saw mill Suppose this establishment had been conveyed by the name of the steam saw mill what would pass? There is much in the books with respect to this species of property for it is of quite modern invention and there is no other mill of the kind in this part of the country

The Railroad Meeting this Afternoon

To the Editor of the Weekly Courier

Please allow me to use your columns enough to urge our merchants to attend the meeting of those interested in the subject of a railway from Bangor to Calais via Ellsworth direct At the two informal meetings held at the Penobscot Exchange this week enough was shown to satisfy those present that a subscription of twenty thousand dollars, given by the business men of Bangor, added to what the towns along the proposed line of road are now voting to give, will secure to Bangor and her merchants a railroad of standard gauge with steel rails and well equipped built and running between Bangor and Calais via Ellsworth and Machias before June 1st 1884 I understand the committee appointed by the meeting held last Monday will be ready to report this afternoon, and I hope every man in Bangor who has goods to sell and would like a way of getting his goods to a population of 82 000 people owning estate valued at $18 000 000 who are now almost as much away from Bangor as if they lived in Wisconsin, will be present at the meeting in the City Council Room this afternoon at four o'clock and make up his mind how much he is willing to give to have a chance opened up for such a market for his goods

Sons of Temperance }
Bangor March 2 1882 }

Whereas, In the mysterious dispensations of Divine Providence it has pleased our Heavenly Father to break our chain of friendship in the sudden removal of our esteemed friend and Brother PAUL R SEAVEY by death, therefore,

Resolved That we bow in humble submission to the Divine Will

Resolved That in our deceased Brother we recognized an earnest and faithful co worker in the cause of Temperance, "the cause of all mankind" whose hand and heart were ever open to raise and save the fallen, and save others from falling, and to uphold the truth cause of so many falling and who was ever ready to speak encouraging words for the good of the cause

Resolved, That the hearty sympathy of our Division and its members are cordially extended to the bereaved family, relatives and large circle of friends of our departed brother, and in the belief that the Great Partaker above has taken him to the haven of rest where sorrow is never known and love and harmony shall reign for ever

Resolved That in token of our sorrow the charter of our Division be draped for three months, that these resolutions be entered on our records and a certified copy be presented to the family of our noble brother and that a copy be presented to the daily papers for publication

THE FIRST OFFICIAL ORDER EVER ISSUED TO THE MILITIA OF MAINE

The following General Order of Governor William King, being the first ever issued to the Militia of this State, was read by Governor Plaisted at the Second Regiment Banquet, on Wednesday evening, March 1st

STATE OF MAINE.

HEADQUARTERS PORTLAND }
June 20, 1820 }

GENERAL ORDERS

Fellow Soldiers —Connected for many years past in the performance of military duty with many of you, and now, by the suffrages of my fellow citizens associated with you all, it is peculiarly proper that I should address you on the present occasion. Our Constitution has been framed and adopted with uncommon unanimity; invidious and improper exemptions are no longer tolerated, which will no doubt animate you with new zeal in the discharge of your duty as citizen soldiers.

Having an extensive and exposed seacoast, and a territory bordering to the North and the East upon the possessions of a foreign power, with whom, I trust, we shall on our part ever cultivate friendly relations, but with whom we have more than once been in a state of hostility, you cannot be too strongly impressed with the importance of the services which you may be called upon to render to your country While we rely with confidence upon the government of the United States for general protection and defence, the militia must ever be considered as constituting our main pillar of security on all sudden emergencies as standing armies are equally opposed to the genius of our government and the feelings and interests of the people

Relying on your good conduct, spirit and discipline I flatter myself that you will not permit yourselves to suffer in comparison with the troops of any part of our country I request you fellow soldiers to be assured of my exertions in promoting the best interests of the Militia and of my particular attention to every meritorious officer, while on the other hand, it will be my object to see that the laws are promptly executed where the character of the officer is not honorable supported

AN IMPORTANT MAINE INDUSTRY.

The Canning of Vegetables, Fruit, Meats and Fish---The Sardine Industry

[Correspondence of the Boston Journal]

AUGUSTA, Feb 24 The packing of canning business in Maine is getting to be one of great importance furnishing business for many men and women and bringing a large sum of money into the State annually It will readily be seen that a large amount of labor necessarily enters into the production of canned goods In the canning of corn there is, first, the raising by the farmers, the drawing to the factory, followed by the husking and the other operations in canning Then there is the making of cans, boxes for packing etc besides the erection of the buildings occupied In the canning of fish lobsters and clams, there is the catching to be added to the packing and the transportation connected with the business is very large, making business for the steamboat lines and railroads in shipping supplies to the seats of operation and the products to market

In preparing this article, the original intention was to get facts and figures from all parties in the State in this line of business In some cases the inquiries were promptly and definitely answered, but in a majority of cases were without success so that the account must necessarily be incomplete

THE LEADING INTERESTS

The Portland Packing Company, a corporation composed of live business men of Portland, is doing the largest business of any concern now in the State In addition to its Maine business the company has two factories in Nova Scotia and one in New Brunswick The capital invested is $300 000 In this State the company has one factory in Portland, where 160 men are employed five months of the year packing meats, it has corn canning establishments at Cumberland Mills Stroudwater, Gorham, Nebago Lake Naples and Fryeburg and are erecting others at Wells and Winthrop each of which gives employment from 300 to 350 persons including farmers during the packing season—six weeks in each year—and 150 men seven months in each year making cans for these factories and for the lobster and other fish canning establishments at Prospect Harbor where 150 men are employed three months of the year, Hammond's Cove, where 75 men work three months, and at Burnt Cove where 70 men work five months of the year Thus it will be seen that this company gives employment to 235 men five months 210 men three months 50 men seven months, and 2 650 men six weeks in each year in the State, also 1 625 men three months and 36 men four months each year at various places in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland The value of the company's product for 1881 was $500 000

Burnham & Morrill, of Portland have $250 000 invested in the packing business They have factories at Portland Searsport Milbridge Eastport Brewer South Paris Denmark and Jonesport in Maine and at Harrison Bruhl Crow Harbor Port Clyde and Harrigan

MARRYING WITHOUT LOVE.

PART I.

"Do you call her pretty? There is something very taking in her face, but as far as beauty is concerned, she cannot be compared to a quarter of the girls here tonight."

"You have never spoken to her? No? Well, then, you should be introduced; and if you don't change your opinion in half an hour I shall give you credit for very much good taste."

The first speaker laughed, and then lazily made his way round the crowded ballroom to the fair lady, who—the woman they had been speaking of was just rising to join in the waltz that was being played. The other made inquiry of a pretty-looking girl seated by her mother, to claim her for the dance.

"I quite agree with Mr. Lorton" said the mother, a highly respectable looking British matron; "Mrs Durward is one is the most ordinary-looking person, and, what is more, I do not understand Mrs. Osborne taking her up. No one knows anything about her, whether she be widow or wife, or really married at all. She makes one doubtful when there is such a my stery about her husband. I dare say I am uncharitable, but really when one has daughters, one can't be too careful. I will not allow Rosa to make her acquaintance."

Rosa did not look very much impressed by her mother's prudence and was evidently longing to join in the waltz. She gave a little pouch to the arm of her partner which he understood.

"You are quite right, Mrs Smith," he said, placing his arm around the girl's waist preparatory to gliding into the whirling crowd "Though I really think it must be only malice that could speak against Mrs Durward; but, as you say, one knows very little of her just like"

He had unconsciously raised his voice a little, as he had already carried his partner a few steps off, and his words were heard by one or two couples as they passed him In a short time Mrs Durward was looked at curiously by a good many as she floated round the room, one of the most graceful dancers of the evening, and those ladies who knew nothing of the circumstances of the case, and who had been disposed to treat her with cordiality at the commencement of the evening as the intimate friend of their hostess, rather altered their tactics. One or two followed Mrs Smith's example, and whispered to their daughters that they had only knew more of Mrs Durward it would be just as well to keep her at a distance.

As the latter speaker and his partner lost themselves in the crowd, a chat of about their five stepped out from the shadow of a curtain just behind the seat occupied by Mrs Smith. It stood for a moment beside the people, as they passed, with a curious expression on his hand-some fair face Pride, anger, disgust, and mingling with them all a strange kind of attract in which was yet half repulsion, were depicted on it, but she did not seem suddenly he turned to make a discovery. As he felt the corner in which he had been sheltering himself he turn ed full on the respectable back of Mrs Smith, and the expression of his face turned to one of such decided wrath and contempt that it would have considerably astonished the good lady had she seen it

"Cackling old idiot" he thought, with an inward disgust. "Heaven preserve us from such women as this! And I would just like to have the opening of that fellow's head pre-ventively."

His walk was just ending, and as the last strains died away, with a sudden resolve that he could have an hour for forever, he turned to cross the room. Everybody was having a rest for tool in dance or the refreshments of dancing starts A lady, who had just dismissed her partner, was sauntering alone in a conservatory that opened out in the ballroom. Her white dress gleamed softly against the banks of dark green ferns but beside the fanned the cons reatory, the man who was so shy her stopped irresolutely. He stood for a second, tugging his moustache with angry disgust

I suppose I had better, though it does seem very ridiculous, but after the chatter of these fools one must be careful"

He turned his steps in the direction of the hostess, who was standing talking to some other guests

"You wish to be introduced" she said, laying her hand on his arm "You will like her, I think She is a very great favorite of mine"

Long found her standing by the fountain that was playing in the conservatory, idly watching its waters as they flashed and sparkled among the cool green plants. An enormous fern formed a background to her slight graceful figure, and the rose color of the lips threw a soft shade over the face that was rather too pale for perfect beauty

The man looked at her curiously as he approached with their hostess, but she seemed too absorbed in her dreams to hear their step

Now this is too bad" said Mrs. Osborne, with a little laugh "Here you are alone again You are the most unsociable woman I know."

Mrs Durward started, laid turned to them, her fan falling to the ground with a little crash.

"I have been dancing all the evening," she said looking slightly at a loss, lock the fan that Mrs Osborn's companion picked up for her. "I was so hot and tired that I came in here for rest"

Mrs Osborne shook her head.

"Well I am not going to let you dream alone over that absurd little to-man. I have brought you a companion. Mr. Durward—Mrs Durward. You ought to be introduced, the name is indomitable," and, with a little nod and a smile, Mrs Osborne returned to the other room

There was an awkward pause—awkward, at least, on the side of the man; for Mrs Durward looked perfectly quiet and self po-sessed as the sank carelessly into a chair There was another chair by it and for a second or two Bertram Du ward looked at it hesitatingly, then, too, sat down.

The conservatory was quite deserted, nearly all the dancers having gone down to supper and the rest were making the most of the comparatively empty ball room. Bertram Durward had wished to have the place free of curious observers, and yet now the solitude rather oppressed him for mistaken the first time in his life he felt nervous, and it irritated him beyond endurance to see the cool indifference of the woman at his side, as she leaned back in her chair lazily fluttering her fan to the tune of the lovely waltz, whose strains floated to them from the neighboring room She seemed to have no intention of beginning the conversation and for the life of him he could think of nothing to say.

"Do you care for dancing?" a sweet voice broke the awkward silence that had reigned for the last three minute, and for one second a pair of soft, dreamy gray eyes were lifted to his, only to drop again languidly.

Bertram Durward flushed an angry crimson.

"Do I like dancing?" The tone of his voice was one of unmistakable indignation and wonder.

The girl—for in her delicate fairness she looked nothing more—raised herself slightly and looked at him half impatient, wrathful face. The only thing that held the perfect indifference of the grave, quiet gaze was the faintest shade of pink that tinged her cheeks. The look meant recognition, but at the same time repudiation.

Bertram Durward sprang to his feet.

"I see what you mean; we are to be perfect strangers, though I know you recognized me, as I did you, when we met so unexpectedly an hour ago in the hall; but does it not strike you that this cannot go on forever? A man cannot be tied his whole life to a wife whom he never sees from year's end to year's end?"

"You have arranged very well for nine years," she said, rising to her feet; and the scorn of her quiet voice, and the flash of the eyes that had looked so creamy a moment before, made Bertram Durward feel ashamed of his unreasonable outbreak

"Yes, but an anomaly I ke that cannot last. I am neither free nor marr ed."

"How selfish you men are!" The words seemed to break from her in irresistible wonder.

It may seem impossible, but up to this momen , though Bertram Durward was not selfish, as men of the world go, though he was far nobler and better than half his companions and friends, yet he had never once thought of this strange ma riage as pressing heavily on any one but himself. To be bound to a woman for whom he cares no more than for the merest stranger he passed in the street, so live as free in the world that made so much of him, perhaps because he was free, and yet to be bound as completely as any other Benedict of his acquaintance, and, to add to these discomforts, to hear his wife spoken of as he had heard it this evening—I think was simple torture of his pride. Though he had never seen her once since the morning they were married, nine years ago, she was still his wife, and her fame was his. For some time he had been rebelling against the oddness of the fate that had hampered him so entirely, and the chance words and mel ing of that evening had decided him to end the farce which had been going on for so long. He must try and put up with the discomfort of a wife who was nor of his own choosing. The other position was growing intolerable. Now, for the first time, he discovered that she, too, had suffered, perhaps more than he, and also that the termination of the comedy would not be so easily brought about as he had fancied

Those slanderous lying tongues! for that they were lies he knew well enough Though he had never once met his wife until that night he knew that her life had been as pure as an angel's. In that one exclamation of hers his own selfishness burst upon him like a revelation.

"I beg your pardon," he stammered, ashamed and confused. "I had forgotten that it must have been disagreeable to you, too"

"It does not matter," was the indifferent answer, as she played carelessly with the frond of a tall fern. "I have managed very well—as well as you."

Her cold disdain roused him again, and his anger flamed up all the more hotly in that the new view he had gotten of himself was not a pleasant one.

"But suppose I have not managed! Suppose I am tired of holding this nonsense up properly! All our trying to imagine that we are not married will not alter the fact that we are husband and wife, and any wife I might wish to have you back, and are and this fellow seems to"

"You won t not do anything so ungenerous, so wicked!" she exclaimed, breathlessly. "You promised on your honor!"

Then with a gesture of disdain, she turned away with a haughty inflexible scorn in her face that Bertram Durward felt he would have had much pleasure in knocking himself down for a foolish boy spoken of

"Am I, then, so very distasteful to you?" he asked with moody sullenness. "It isn' a very pleasant state of affa rs."

"No, it is not," she answered, turning to him again, all her angry excitement vanished. "It has been unfortunate from the beginning; we are both quite decided about that. The only mistake you have made is that you fancied yourself the only suffer er.

He made an a tempt to speak, but with a slight gesture she silenced him. "I do not complain, I look upon it as my bondage and made the best of it; you seem to have done other wise, it is be tter, what you tell me." A faint smile, more than half contrite, curled her lips "But we have made a good t ial, perhaps sufficiently long for nine years; it is a pity we should quarrel the first time we meet, especially as it will be the last."

"You n regret our meeting?" he asked a little bitterly

She bowed her head, "You must see for yourself that the result are painful"

He was silenced again by her coolness This was not the kind of interest e ring with. he was going to condescend to place in his home

She was silent, too, and if he had thought in stead of a feeling that he had code of consideration, and what was more that she was anxious for him to leave her Mortified, angry, and yet with a curiosity attracted by the quiet, self possessed woman who stood in such strange relation-ship to himself, he could not make up his mind to go away at once.

"Why may I give me a dance?" he asked suddenly, with an attempt at a smile "We are only strangers"

She glanced up into his face, her own slightly astonished, then with but a shade of embarrassment, she laid her hand on his arm

"Certainly if you wish it"

Though she granted his request, he could not help the slight thrill of disappointment that ran through him at her perfect unconcern It all seemed as strange dream to Bertram Durward, in which a curious doubt and pleasure mingled so completely that I was hard to say which predominated. He scarcely felt the light figure in his arms, whose touch, felt his own therefore in hour, with a vague wonder that it was perfect in every other thing, at least this one waltz was perfectly successful; and it was with a very unreasonable feeling of regret—considering how little time it had been the habit of thinking of his marriage—that he relinquished his wife a last. He had a dim feeling that this was the end of the romance that had taken place so strangely in this London drawing room, and the prospect of the coming years, tottered away in amusements or aimless wander lings round the world, began to look rather dreary.

He glanced down at the girl's face. Her breath was coming quickly through he parted lips, while the rosy flush on her cheeks and the sparkle in her eyes made her look very different from the pale listless woman w o had treated him so disdainfully a few minutes ago Unconsciously he drew her a little closer, never wondering how on earth he could have been such a fool as to call her plain and dull that afternoon nine years before when he had met her for the first time at his aunt's centennial old guardian's."

"Can you tell me which is Mrs Durward?" asked a woman's voice, in rather unguarded tones, as they rested for a moment near one of the open doors. "I have heard such a number of extraordinary things about her to-night, that I wonder Mrs. Osborne cares to ask such a person."

"That was just what I was saying," said Bertram Durward the tone as Mrs Smith's "They say she is separated from her husband. Of course, she may be all right, but—"

The speaker had been a man he would have paid dearly for the speech Bertram Durward's face turned white with anger There was no need for him to look to see if the girl had heard it too.

He felt a sudden quiver of the white arm on his, as if the cruel words had pierced to her heart. Then the proud young figure straightened itself and the quivering lips grew still and the stormy light in flashing defiance to all the gell gossip of the heart less world.

"You must I me protect you. It is not good for you to live as you do," he said, grave almost to sternness.

With a sudden movement she drew herself away, and faced him with the same look he had seen in the conservatory.

"Innocence needs no protection, Mr Durward," she said haughtily, and yet with a quiet dignity that made his offer of protection seem an impertinence.

He had a desperate to ask for another dance which he felt sure she would refuse him, and so for the space of the next half hour he planted himself again near the friendly curtain, and looked on with disguised wonder at the girl, cruel that seemed to be enjoying i self so completely in the frivolities of the hour, and tried hard to persuade himself that he was not waiting to catch another glance from those gray eyes that never deigned even to look in his direction. He left soon after, and walked home, hoping that a little exercise might drive off the unusual unsociable feeling that seemed to be troubled him; but all through his walk he was haunted by a pale face and two serious gray eyes, that flashed before him through the lamp-lighted streets, and, to add to his trouble, he could give no name to this provoking shadow. He ransacked his brain in va n, but was at last obliged to come to this sight his wife had borne so little part in his thoughts or his life that he could not even remember her name. To call her Mrs. Durward would have been too ridiculous!
